Project Title

Sexual Lexicon in Hesychius and Ancient Greek Lexica

Project Description

The postdoctoral researcher will classify the sexual terms present in the Greek lexicographic tradition, focusing especially on the lexica of Hesychius, Suda, and (pseudo-)Zonaras, as well as smaller lexica from antiquity to the Byzantine period. The candidate is expected to establish the meaning of the individual terms found in the lexica, their semantic evolution, their role in the lexicographic tradition, and, when possible, the original context of use in ancient Greek literature.

Keywords

ancient greek lexicography, historical semantics, philology

Description of the Host Research Lab

Orient et Méditerranée is a research entity of eminent scientific quality and significant scale, bringing together a large proportion of the strengths of French research in the fields it covers. Its work spans a coherent geographical area, the Mediterranean, from the Pharaonic world to the dawn of the Renaissance. It involves all the disciplines of humanities and social sciences.
